Burns Killed Yamagata

DOCTORS MACDONALD AND UCHIDA AGREE WITH THE OPINION OF DR. SINCLAIR.

Dr. J. T. Macdonald was the first expert called this morning in the House manslaughter case, following Dr. Sinclair. He testified to having examined the kidneys and heart of Yamagata, introduced in evidence, and he agreed with Dr. Sinclair as to the cause of death. It was acute parenchymatous nephritis and not acute interstitial nephritis. The main difference between the two jawbreaking terms as it appeared while the attorneys threw them about, is that the parenchymatous variety of nephritis, or kidney disease, is of the nature of a sudden attack, while the interstitial nephritis is a chronic disease.

Dr. Macdonald declared that the case was easy to diagnose by microscopic tests, but that without such tests it might have been difficult. Humphreys then asked him the hypothetical question which was put to Dr. Sinclair, "I say he died of burns," was the doctor's answer.

"What produced the acute parenchymatous nephritis?" asked Humphreys.

"The burns," was the doctor's answer.

Dr. Macdonald's cross examination by Kinney was not very lengthy and about 11 o'clock Dr. Uchida was called.

He had made most of the microscopic slides in the case. He gave the same opinion as the other two physicians as to the nature of the kidney trouble showed by the tests. There was no chronic disease to be found. "Did you find any trace of interstitial nephritis?" asked Humphreys.

"Yes, mean chronic?" asked the doctor. "No, I didn't."

Dr. Uchida wanted an interpreter and there was considerable difficulty in getting his testimony, owing to the use of many difficult terms. By using a mixture of English and Japanese however, he managed to make himself clear. He appeared to know the English jawbreakers of medical science, but not the ordinary English, and consequently he spoke a marvelous combination.

Dr. Kobayashi is the prosecution's next witness.

SEVENTEEN PUPILS RECEIVE CERTIFICATES

THE NORMAL SCHOOL SENDS OUT SEVENTEEN FROM THEIR MIDST TO TEACH IN THE SCHOOLS.

Seventeen graduates of the Honolulu Normal School received their certificates as teachers this morning at the school's assembly hall after a splendid program had been rendered. The graduates, dressed in white made a very effective group of young teachers. All were given a certificate to teach in the schools of the Territory.

At 9:10 o'clock this morning school opened as usual and about two hours were spent in exhibition of the work of the school and giving an exhibition of the teaching done by the young teachers. At 10:45 the pupils and teachers gathered in the assembly hall of the school where the commencement program was rendered.

The program opened by the school singing Rudyard Kipling's "Recessional." Then Principal Edgar Wood called on the Superintendent of Public Instruction Babbitt for an address. In a short terse address the Superintendent urged the young teachers to have sympathy with their scholars and he was sure that they would meet with success. His remarks were listened to with great interest of the part of the audience.

A double quartette then sang "The Bells of Seville" as arranged by Venezia. The quartette, which was composed of students of the school sang remarkably well.

Judge Dole then addressed the graduating class after which the certificates were presented to the class by the principal of the school, Prof. Edgar Wood.

The work which the Normal school has completed during the past year reflects much credit upon the corps of teachers. The work on exhibition is very good and shows much labor and thought on the part of the pupils.
